

The Sculpture of Dan Ostermiller

Coming this summer to the Cheyenne Botanic Gardens

ABOUT THE ARTIST:

Sculptor Dan Ostermiller draws on his vast knowledge and experience as a taxidermist under the tutelage of his father, renowned taxidermist, Roy Ostermiller, as the foundation of his animal sculpture. He works in the tradition of the French 19th century animaliers and uses his keen observations of animals all over the world, resulting in the expression of each animal's essence. His work has a realism that is not just an accurate rendering of the subject, but a sophisticated combination of line and composition. His thorough grounding in taxidermy lends authority to his designs, but the technique that evolved out of his knowledge of anatomy gives his work spontaneity, setting it outside the realm of mere duplication of an animal's image. Infusing each design is personality – a combination of the sculptor's and the subject's. Dan has been a catalyst for support and promotion of the arts in his home of Loveland, Colorado. He has been recognized by his peers through election as Fellow in the National Sculpture Society and the Society of Animal Artists and served as President of the National Sculpture Society from 2011-2014.
